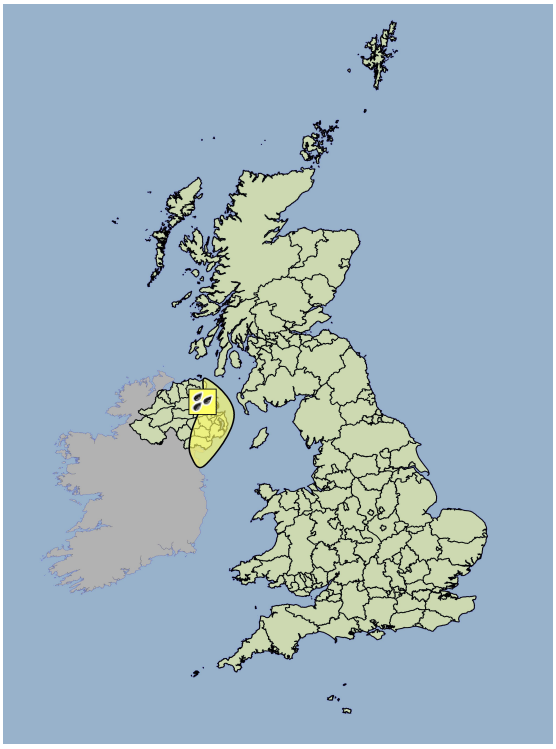
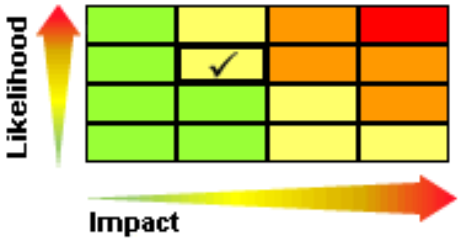
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
During today a small-scale low pressure centre will drift north, keeping showers going, particularly across eastern fringes of Northern Ireland where a further 15 to 20 mm may fall locally.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 08:00 on Wed, 12th Nov 2014 until 17:00 on Wed, 12th Nov 2014

Although the heaviest of the rain will have passed, occasional heavy showers are still likely to affect areas saturated by recent rainfall. The public should be aware that this may prolong the risk of localised flooding in some areas. Drier conditions will follow from the south later this afternoon and early this evening.
